Knowledge Horizon opens e-learning centre in India

New office located in 'Oxford of the East'

Staff Report

Dubai Knowledge Horizon has recently opened a new development centre in Pune, India. This centre will mainly focus on designing and developing content for Knowledge Horizon's e-Learning courseware.

The centre was opened as part of the vision of Knowledge Horizon's president, Dr. Ma'en Al Qatamin, to provide training to individuals anywhere and at anytime. The opening of Knowledge Horizon e-Learning in India is the first major step forward in the direction towards the major goal of spreading education.

The new office is almost 3,100 square feet surrounded by the lush green trees which is appropriate for content development and creativity. It is located in Pune, close to the western coast of India, 155 kilometres from Mumbai. The office premises are in the heart of the city, in Shivajinagar.

Pune is known as the Oxford of the East due to its popularity for education.

The content development team in India will be the starting point for developing Knowledge Horizon's courseware and then will work in coordination with the branch in Jordan, where production will be completed.
